

Aesthetic shaping for ballet performances and contemporary girl's textile prints design

Prof. Islam Omar Al-Najdi

vice Dean at the high institute of theatrical arts - Academy of Arts (décor department)

elnagdiG9@yahoo.com

Prof. Sohair Mahmoud Osman

Former Prof. of Design, Department of Textile Printing, Dyeing and Finishing, and Former Vice Dean for Community Service and Environmental Development Affairs

faculty of Applied Arts - Helwan University

sohair_52@hotmail.com

Researcher. Ola Mahmoud Mustafa

A master's degree in textile printing, dyeing and finishing - Faculty of Applied Arts - Helwan University

loshymahmoud@yahoo.com

Abstract

The art of ballet is one of the branches of expressive dance, which is accompanied by music, gestures, and theatrical scenes (1). As for opera, it is considered one of the important arts that emanate from the arts of drama and theater in general, and opera has been called "mother art" because of its nature that requires the assimilation of most of the arts The drama, audio, and video and the various artistic elements it contains, and despite the fact that each of these elements is unique in its language, alphabet, tools and techniques, these elements merge in one melting pot to produce a combined collective vision through the views of the artists who are based on it, in order to come out with a work (operatic artistic theater) . (2)

The design process depends on the designer's ability to innovate because he exploits his studies and imaginative abilities to create an innovative work that leads to the achievement of the purpose or function for which the design was developed (3) Thanks to the scientific developments of tools and techniques, the designer benefited from these trends and opened new horizons for him to reach innovative treatments. , The study aims to emphasize the importance of using new resources for the arts and trying to inspire formative relationships suitable for creating printed girls' fabric designs, and the research included an artistic study and analysis of ballet art and how to use it in creating designs through the dynamic rhythm of ballet in (forming a new design) that enriches a field Designing contemporary girls 'fabrics especially the "subject of the research" using modern methods of printing (digital printing) and computer programs specialized in determining the shape of the print design of contemporary girls' fabrics, as the field of textile printing design in the Egyptian market is in dire need of more innovations that meet consumer needs in The twenty-first century in light of the spread of external ideas to the local markets.

Key words :

Print designs for contemporary girls' fabrics - Ballet - Kinetic drama