

Modern Architecture as an Inspiration for Contemporary Fashion Design

Assist. Prof. Dr. sarah mohamed ali gomaa

Assistant Professor, Readymade Garments Department, Faculty of Applied Arts, Helwan University

sarah_arts62@hotmail.com

Abstract:

Fashion is an art of plastic arts that has a close relationship with other arts that appear in the cultural and civilized climate. In each historical period, these arts pursue a distinctive artistic cover that expresses the spirit of the age and the requirements of that period, and then the forces that affect the fashion designer are the same forces that affect the Fine artists in other fields.

We find a clear exchange between the style of clothing and the style of architecture, furniture, decoration and other arts, which indicates the close mutual relationship between fashion art and other plastic arts, and from this relationship it is possible to identify the culture and civilization of peoples and their arts in any historical period.

Architectural art is considered one of the arts that is directly related to fashion design throughout the ages and civilizations.

Throughout history, the human body has been of great interest to the plastic artist in all fields (painting - sculpture - architecture - fashion design), which necessitated the need for each of them to know the scientific origins of the human body, its obstacles and dimensions, and the structural body to create designs and formations of artistic, aesthetic and utilitarian value.

 Keywords:

(Architecture, Inspiration, Fashion Design)