

Spanish architecture inspired fashion with puppets

Prof. Naglaa Mohamed Teama

Professor of clothing design-vice Dean of applied Arts for postgraduate studies-Damietta university

Dr. Basma Reda Al fanagely

Lecturer in readymade garments-faculty of applied Arts-Damietta university

basma.rd55@gmail.com

Abstract:

Modern art, with its school, its trends, its aesthetic and artistic values, and the source of innovation and creativity in the field of design in particular, and the arts in general, is considered a center rich in all art and creativity. And the internal or external clothes differ in terms of design, shape, type of material or accessory depending on the occasion in which they are worn, and the outer clothes also differ according to the occasion in which they are worn, such as weddings, holidays, private visits, work and universities. And other different occasions, as the art of fashion design throughout history has had a prominent role in expressing the renaissance of societies technically and scientifically, and the largest evidence of this is what happened during the Corona pandemic that passes through the whole world from the interruption of many things, but different alternatives have been present. to her. Hence, art played its role in using alternatives by replacing the live fashion shows that everyone awaited with virtual costumes or using miniature models of clothes (dolls). In this research, a variety of royal evening and wedding dresses are designed, inspired by Spanish architecture, as a source of inspiration, as they are rich in beauty, accuracy, innovation and modernity and have been applied to miniature models and nothing less than live performances. These ideas have received all the support and appreciation. As the results of this research showed the possibility of replacing live fashion shows and replacing them with small models to create artistic innovations as a design entry for the variety of modern fashion shows that suit women's fabrics and also suit their ages. It does not stop with a fleeting crisis. The artist's creativity depends on several factors, the most important of which is the extent of the sincere coexistence that the artist lives in the artistic currency, starting with the idea and the material and how they were formulated to create a wonderful artistic work

Keywords:

Art - Fashion - Corona Pandemic - Puppets